News & Fundamentals float during the week

TMC : Indian turmeric futures fell on Friday on expectations of higher output, conducive weather for the sown crop and on mounting stocks from the old crop. Turmeric cultivation usually starts in the last week of May and continues till August, and a lengthy harvesting process begins from January. Weather is clear and suitable for the growth of the crop. Production is expected higher as yields would be good.

Jeera : Indian jeera, or cumin seed, futures fell due to higher stocks, expectations of better sowing on good rains and higher-than-expected supplies. India is the world's biggest producer, exporter and consumer of the spice. Export demand is lower-than-expected and stocks are high. Supplies still have been good despite the lean season. Syria is the second-largest jeera producer in the world, followed by Turkey.

News & Fundamentals float during the week
Soy-complex:

Soybean futures seen ranged bound next week Friday on oversupply woes in the domestic market amid speculation of lower crop estimates from US Department of Agriculture (USDA). Soybean prices looks very ranged as there are some important data is due. However, domestic cues are weak. Soybean output in India is expected to increase as much as 18% on year to a record 13.34 million tons in 2013-14, as per industry estimates. However, sharp fall in the oilseed prices may be capped amid speculation that the USDA may cut soybean yield forecast as bad weather condition could have damaged the crop in the world's biggest bean producer,

News & Fundamentals float during the week

Chana : Chana futures may trade at over one week low next week as rates in the physical market continue to trade lower amid expectations of renewed imports as the rupee recovers. Prices are not seen sustaining at higher levels due to increasing selling pressure. With the weather getting clearer arrivals at Madhya Pradesh increased last week.

Guar-Complex : Guar futures are likely to climb to fresh record next week on speculation of deficient rainfall in key growing areas amid swelling prices in the physical market. In the past one-week guar complex futures hit the upper circuit limit for five consecutive sessions as rainfall data sparked fear of crop damage among farmers leading to sharp rise in prices.
